

CALL FOR PAPERS

Contemporary Mediterranean, Vol. 5 (2026), Issue 1

Contemporary Mediterranean is an international peer-reviewed scientific journal for social sciences and humanities, published by the University of Dubrovnik. This multidisciplinary journal publishes papers from political science, sociology, contemporary history, cultural studies, information and communication sciences, and other related disciplines dealing with the Mediterranean area. The journal understands the Mediterranean as a region encompassing countries and territories with access to the Mediterranean Sea, while also welcoming research examining transnational processes, relationships, and developments shaping the Mediterranean. For its forthcoming issue, Contemporary Mediterranean invites submissions of original, previously unpublished research in Croatian or English. We particularly encourage original scientific papers presenting new empirical findings, theoretical contributions, comparative analyses, or innovative methodological approaches to contemporary Mediterranean societies, politics, media, culture, and history.

Relevant topics may include, but are not limited to:

- politics, governance, democracy of the Mediterranean environment
- media, journalism, digital platforms, and information environments
- migration, mobility, and demographic change
- identity, culture, heritage, and collective memory
- European integration and EU-Mediterranean relations
- contemporary historical processes affecting the Mediterranean
- technological and digital transformations of Mediterranean societies
- society, culture and identity of Mediterranean

Types of submissions - the journal welcomes:

- Original scientific papers
- Review papers
- Expert papers
- Conference papers
- Preliminary communications
- Book reviews

Submission guidelines

- Journal articles: 6,000–8,000 words
- Book reviews: 1,000–2,000 words
- Abstracts (120–150 words) with five keywords, in both Croatian and English
- Manuscripts submitted in .doc/.docx format
- Full formatting and citation guidelines available at:
<https://contmed.net/en/instructions>

Peer review

All submissions undergo double-blind review by at least two independent reviewers. The final decision on publication rests with the journal's Editorial Board.

Open access & publication fees

Contemporary Mediterranean is a fully open-access journal. There are no article processing charges (APCs) or submission fees. Authors retain copyright under a Creative Commons Attribution License (CC BY 4.0).

Submission deadline: November 15, 2026

How to submit

Authors must register an account and submit their manuscript, along with a signed Statement of originality, via the journal's online platform: <https://contmed.net/en/paper-submission>

For further information, please consult the journal's Aims & Scope and Instructions for Authors, or contact the editorial office at <https://contmed.net/en/contact>.

For direct inquiries, you may also contact the Editor-in-Chief, Davor Pauković, at davor.paukovic@unidu.hr.

Uredništvo
SUVREMENI MEDITERAN
Dubrovnik